D. J. May Is Now Happily Married

Mountain Hill Farmer Wins Palm for Whirlwind Romance in Washington, N. C.

D. J. May, prosperous farmer of the Mountain Hill section whose correspondence courtship with Mrs. Eliza Salisbury of New York State came recently to grief and is now happily married. He was wed to Miss Annie Selby of Washington, N. C., a week ago and won new laurels for a whirlwind romance. Just twenty-two hours after having met her, he was married to her and both are now living on his farm near the city.

Mr. May admits that newspaper publicity given to his previous disastrous affair with his bride. His plight softened the heart of women in all parts of the country and as result of this he was showered with letters from women ranging in ages from 17 to 57, these coming from as far south as Atlanta and as far north as Baltimore.

"What did I do with them?" he countered to the reporter's query this morning, "why I strung them on a string of fish and answered every one of them."

May made a full avowal of his affair de coeur when asked to do so. "You all wrote up so much about my love life," he said, "I thought now it's all over," he said. He stated that a few days after accounts of his failure to wed Mrs. Salisbury he began receiving letters from various women. All of these he says, suggested further correspondence with matrimony the object. May read them all over carefully and answered them as they came. One of the letters came from Miss Selby, who he told, was a school teacher at Washington, N. C. Mr. May said that this letter appealed to him more strongly than the others and he was attracted by her handwriting. Correspondence with her was readily established and finally Mr. May decided to meet her. Yesterday, a week ago, he journeyed to Washington, N. C., where he had an appointment with the young woman.

He says he was introduced to her and shook hands with her at ten o'clock on Friday morning. They were riding to Miss Selby's home, who was over in a dispassionate way and in agreement to be married without further delay was reached. A Washington minister performing the ceremony the following day, after which they returned to Danville.

Upon arrival here May found three more letters from engaging young women all of them seeking his hand in marriage, but in these he had no further interest. Mr. May said that 22 days after receiving the first letter from Miss Selby they were married.

SUNDAY WILL BE HERE OCTOBER 9TH

Evangelist To Preach Here On Monday Fortnight

The Danville Ministerial union held a called meeting this morning at the Young Men's Christian association at which time affirmative action was taken on a resolution presented by Rev. O. B. Newton, inviting Rev. William A. Sunday to come to Danville to deliver a sermon.

Soon after this action had been taken Rev. Mr. Newton was authorized to get in touch without delay with the evangelist now conducting services in Lynchburg and before noon it was agreed that "Billy" Sunday will be here on October 9, two weeks from next Monday to preach at the Tabernacle.

It was found out that the evangelist could not be here for a night service but that he would preach at the tabernacle either at 10:30 o'clock in the morning or at 1 o'clock, this to be determined later.

Eight ministers were present at the meeting, one of who failing, it is said, to vote in the affirmative. Those present were Revs. H. W. Dugan, Charles L. Garrison, J. C. Holland, M. S. Taylor, M. W. Royall, O. B. Newton, J. T. Allen and J. M. Shelburne. Proxies were held for Rev. J. C. Robertson and Rev. J. N. Lathrop, who could not be present. After the matter had been brought up this morning, Rev. Mr. Allen said, the question was discussed and put to the vote in a short while.

The fact that the revivalist cannot come to Danville for one night will probably be a disappointment to many who by reason of their occupations cannot leave their work during the day. Rev. Mr. Sunday is considered one of the strongest and probably the best known evangelist since the day of Sam Jones. Lynchburg is said to have engaged him three years ago or the present mission.

Synod's Session Comes to Close

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 22.—The annual session of the Virginia Southern Presbyterian Church ended here this afternoon, with final arrangements for carrying on the denomination's work for the forthcoming year.

Selections of the site of the next session was deferred.

The synod approved plans for enlarging the scope of its Sunday School work, and approved the appointment of a synodical secretary, at a salary of $1,500 annually.

The Rev. T. J. Currie was appointed to the post. Fourteen new Sunday Schools have organized in the synod during the past year according to the report of the committee on Sunday School work, and the enrollment of scholars has been increased by 5,923.

The report of the committee on Christian education and ministerial relief, which was among a number submitted at the closing session, addressed the need of more pastors. The death rate among the denomination's ministers averages forty annually, according to this report which showed also that sixty nine ministerial candidates were obtained in the Virginia synod last year.

The report added that 307 boys and 182 girls were aided last year from the student loan fund which now amounts to $152,000.

The indowment for ministerial relief in the Southern Presbyterian Church amounts to more than 1,400,000 according to the report.

The synod deferred action on a proposal to elect a synod treasury at a salary of $2,000 annually, and also on a proposal for office help. This session will come up at the next session.

Carriage Builders Invade New York

(By The Associated Press.)
CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 23.—There is a business as well as a sentimental reason for holding the fifteenth annual convention of the Carriage Builders' National Association, oldest industrial organization in America, in New York City, October 9 to 13, says George W. Huston, of Cincinnati, secretary and treasurer.

According to Secretary Huston, it is holding the convention in New York City because the city is the metropolis, where the C. B. N. A. was born; and it will be a good business stroke to show the nation's first city that the carriage trade is far from being a dead one.

The popularity of the automobile hasn't kept the buggy business from prospering," Mr. Huston explains. "Buggies are still largely used in the rural districts and in the suburbs. We also do a large business with South America, where backboard wagons can go over mountain roads inaccessible to autos."

Mr. Huston keeps buggies, in addition to automobiles for use in inclement weather and on bad roads.

Officers of the Carriage Builders' National Association are: President, George W. Huston, Cincinnati; Secretary, Treasurer, Vice-Presidents, W. L. Dicker, Henderson, Ky.; W. C. Hellmann, Union City, Ind.; W. B. Norman, Griffin, Ga.; J. H. Birch, Jr., Burlington, N. J.; B. Taylor, Oxford, N. C.; T. J. McNamara, Cincinnati; M. Robinson, Nashville, Tenn.; and L. R. Jones, Franklin, Va.

A feature will be an exhibit by the association.

"We expect the largest attendance in the history of the organization," says Secretary Huston. "The poverty of holding a buggy convention in the stronghold of the motor car, the subway and the 'L' appeals to many. We are contemplating a horse and buggy parade down Fifth Avenue."

Two Are Indicted For Brutalities to Two-War Veteran

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Indictments charging Timothy J. Lucie and Harry J. Morgan, attendants in United States Veterans' Hospital No. 1, with beating Nicholas B. Samson, an insane patient, were filed yesterday by the Federal Grand Jury.

The beating of Samson led to the investigation of the management of the hospital by a special committee on charges made by Congressman Albert B. Rosendahl. Lucie and Morgan were discharged from service by the military department, medical director of the institution, before the investigation began.

Samson is a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars. He was a cook in the Third Division in the last war. He had served most of his life in the regular army, but after service in France he became incurably insane.

The attack by Lucie and Morgan on Samson is alleged to have occurred Aug. 29. Two ribs and his wrist were fractured, both eyes blackened and he was bruised and cut on the head. Samson was questioned informally by members of the committee that investigated the hospital, but he was not called as a witness because of his mental condition.

Complaint of the attack was made by the patient's sister, Miss Agnes Samson, who took the case first to Dr. Chronquist.

Lucie and Morgan were arrested by the police, but when arraigned before a Magistrate the local authorities found they had no jurisdiction, as the alleged attack took place on property controlled by the United States Government. United States Commissioner Hitchcock then held them under $500 bail each.

Martin W. Littleton, who represented the public on the committee that investigated the hospital, said yesterday that the findings would be ready to be forwarded to Washington to-morrow. He said several sets of stenographers were employed in taking the testimony and the witnesses are being given an opportunity to go over their testimony to make any corrections they wish.

World War Hero Made Governor

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Major General Sir George Molesworth Bridges has been appointed governor of South Australia, succeeding Lieutenant-Colonel Sir William Weigall. The latter resigned the position because he said he could not live on his salary and had not sufficient private means to afford the luxury of maintaining such a position.

His successor, Sir George, is now in the British army as the "Toy Drum Hero." That term has not been applied to him in derision, but in recognition of a memorable incident of the war in which he displayed great gallantry. After the action at Le Cateau in 1914, the British army started on its fighting retreat, and men were dropping out from sheer exhaustion. Major Bridges, as he then was, went back to the front and rallied 250 stragglers.

He found them in a state of exhaustion. At a little village shop he bought a toy drum, and falling the men into line with the toy drum and a penny whistle, to serve as a band, he marched them off, laughing in spite of their weariness. They kept on marching for 23 miles.

Sir George was the military member of the Balfour mission to the U. S. in 1917, and head of the British war mission to the United States in the succeeding year.

Fifty-Eight Children Free Guests of Theatre Recount Story of Cave-in.

(By The Associated Press.)
PITTSBURGH, Sept. 22.—Fifty-eight children of a writing agency recounted the story of the collapse of the Foyer in the Strand Theatre yesterday. Madeline Kunkle, aged eight, one of those invited to a free showing of the picture "The Trap," was killed. Eighteen of the injured are in hospitals. Only four are in a critical condition.

Live Stock Exhibits Will Be Larger

The most wonderful live stock exhibit in the history of The Danville Fair, Danville, October 10 to 13, will be held this year on the Fair Grounds, according to Fair officials.

"No other industry in the State has grown so rapidly," said the Secretary to-day, when asked about the preparations that are being made for the coming Fair. There are hundreds of pure bred animals now where only a dozen were raised a few years ago. The Fair Association shares in the credit of this condition. By means of liberal premiums the Fair has fostered and encouraged the raising of pure-bred cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Scrub herds, flocks, are being replaced by pure-bred ones everywhere.

Live stock worth thousands and thousands of dollars will be exhibited at the Fair. This is only one of the big features of the coming show. The display of fruits, vegetables, and grains will be unusually large. The poultry show, the dog show, the women's work and children's work, all kinds will be of interest to all.

The entertainment program is to be a varied one. Many thrills have been engaged. Officials say that the program will outdo anything of the kind ever carried off at the Fair.

Send in entry sheets to H. B. Watkins, Secretary, as promptly as possible to avoid the rush. Remember the Great Fair will open its gates October 10, only ten days from this date.

World War Hero Made Governor

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Major General Sir George Molesworth Bridges has been appointed governor of South Australia, succeeding Lieutenant-Colonel Sir William Weigall. The latter resigned the position because he said he could not live on his salary and had not sufficient private means to afford the luxury of maintaining such a position.

His successor, Sir George, is now in the British army as the "Toy Drum Hero." That term has not been applied to him in derision, but in recognition of a memorable incident of the war in which he displayed great gallantry. After the action at Le Cateau in 1914, the British army started on its fighting retreat, and men were dropping out from sheer exhaustion. Major Bridges, as he then was, went back to the front and rallied 250 stragglers.

He found them in a state of exhaustion. At a little village shop he bought a toy drum, and falling the men into line with the toy drum and a penny whistle, to serve as a band, he marched them off, laughing in spite of their weariness. They kept on marching for 23 miles.

Sir George was the military member of the Balfour mission to the U. S. in 1917, and head of the British war mission to the United States in the succeeding year.

FULL HOUSES AT MINSTREL SHOW

The full houses greeted the annual appearance here yesterday of Al G. Fields' Minstrels at the Majestic, the performances being generally told as the best of the season.

Minstrelsy never loses its charm indeed, the well known organization of singers, black-face comedians and dancers never allows its programme to pall and this was especially true in this year's show which is more colorful and mighty than ever.

The transformation scenes were particularly effective, so were the many changes in costume. The high order of excellence and as usual Jack Richards and Billy Church were accorded a handsome reception following their songs.

The opening scene still clings to the Mississippi with the race of Robert E. Lee and the Natchez as the motive. There is the usual variegated programme of songs most of them new with a handful of end men who afford clean humor which goes to the heart of the matter.

John Healy is there in the familiar guise of the Southern dandy with his inimitable "Old Black Joe" and dance. The programme of songs has been curtailed this year or was last night and the comedians take a full share of the evening's pleasure. Bert Swor is the principal fun-maker and he carries the main burden of the latter phases of the programme which are given over to the ludicrous which keeps the house rocking with mirth.

Some of the jokes were so old as to provoke only a ripple of response but the repertoire is principally new and Swor and his confederates in fun were especially in the trip to Mars which was in reality a clever parody on the advanced views of Wells and other literary wanderers in unknown worlds. There is in this fantasy an extraordinary leap from the comic to the sacred. After the funmakers have held the stage for nearly half an hour there is a lightning change of scene to a tableau almost sculptural in conception when the Minstrels, led by Jack Richards give an impressive rendering of "The Holy City," the scene almost as suddenly switching back to the ludicrous.

The number and the beauty of the many different scenes were generally commented on last night, the lighting effects being magnificent. As always the ballet is well trained and is featured by the graceful Boni Mack in his clever female impersonations.

One important note in the unfolding of the spectacle is the reminder that Mr. Fields is dead. His photograph is projected on a screen while the cast sings "Should Old Acquaintance Be Forgotten?" In the competition for supremacy in the field of minstrelsy the Fields organization has set a rapid pace which will be hard for the others to beat.

A FRIEND IN NEED A FRIEND INDEED

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sanative Wash. I at once began to get stronger. I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a 'friend indeed' for you were a 'friend indeed' to me."

—Mrs. GEORGE HARDEE, 1043 Byram St., Los Angeles, California.

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound be a "friend indeed" to you.

NO DULL MOMENTS IN "REPORTED MISSING"

Local Theaters Find Big Picture Starring Owen Moore Much to Their Liking.

"Reported Missing" playing at the Broadway Theatre this week is a movie picture that really moves. It is a story of a man who is missing and is a picture which Owen Moore is the leader of a company of performers who have completely mastered the art of entertainment.

The story concerns the efforts of an Oriental shipyard king to gain control of a fleet of ships upon which Owen Moore, as Richard Boyd, has an option. In order that young Boyd's option will lapse the wily Chinaman, who has him, has him kidnapped and then the fun begins. It is just one thrill and laugh after another and the comedy sequences produced a state bordering on hysteria at yesterday's showing. Particularly when Tom Wilson, the actor's faithful colored servant, began wielding a wicked-looking razor in the general direction of the yellow cohorts of Oman the villain.

Nita Naldi, the statuesque Polish beauty, attracted with her marvelous gown and Pauline Garon, the flapper de luxe, had everybody's eyes popping.

The biggest thrill in the picture is a race between a sea sled and a hydroplane, which is followed by a chase in high powered motor cars.

The night in the home of Oman is the greatest ever and one no lover of conflict should miss. It had yesterday's crowd hanging on to the seats. If you want to be thrilled, amused and have a chance to see a villain

see "Reported Missing."

CHICHESTER'S PILLS

KIWANIANS HOLD BIG MEETING

The first day of fall was celebrated by the largest gathering of Kiwanians in many months, at the club's bi-weekly meeting at night at the Danville Country Club. Hugh Keeling was pressed into service as song leader, and with Hamilton Benton at the piano, the music was lively, and the singing of the assemblage was vociferous if not altogether tuneful. In a suddenly staged vocal contest between the tables led by Jim Ley on one side and Callaway Robertson on the other, Jim Ley was declared winner, all of the judges being seated at his table.

A referendum to be called for. Among the visitors present were J. G. Johnson of New York, Preston Smith of Chicago, Edgar Allen Moss, of Marion, Ind., and Bob Mobley, Jr., of this city. Louis Herman was introduced as the club's newest member, and cordially received. Frank Talbot, president of the club, spoke for a few minutes on the principles of the Kiwanis organization for the benefit of the newcomers. Recently added to the club's ranks, he stressed some of the things Kiwanis is NOT, and emphasized the ideals for which it stands, such as the helpfulness to each other and the community, and the building of character in the individual, in business and in the community.

Three five-minute speakers were introduced last evening and each gave a good account of himself. The rule of the club is that no member designated must speak on the subject assigned, or if no subject is assigned, must speak regardless. Arch Aiken spoke first on the subject of the Constitution of the United States and introduced a clear and concise description of this remarkable document, how it came to be, and the purposes it seeks to accomplish. Incidentally he mentioned the important part played by the Kiwanians in the framing of the Constitution, and remarked that in his opinion history had not given Madison the place he deserves for this great work.

Robert Murray spoke on the rubber industry, and the interesting facts regarding the origin of this important commercial product, its development and the processes used in its manufacture, and finally some of the varied uses found for it in modern business.

Jim Catlin, Jr., was introduced to speak on the subject of "Fire Prevention," a timely topic in view of President Harding's proclamation released yesterday afternoon, which calls on the American people to observe Fire Prevention week from October 2 to 9. October 9 is the anniversary of the great Chicago fire of 1871, which is attributed to Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicking over a lantern, and which caused a loss of one hundred and sixty million dollars.

Mr. Catlin gave some startling figures on the annual fire loss in this country. Carelessness was given as the cause of nine out of every ten fires. He warned against the careless use of gasoline, the most explosive power than ten pounds of dynamite. The lighted cigarette is another prolific source of fire waste. Besides the enormous property losses, Mr. Catlin says that about seventeen thousand persons are burned to death yearly, and that in one fire, the Triangle Shirt factory fire in New York, 163 girls workers lost their lives.

Dave Garvin announced that twelve Danville Kiwanians had already signed up to go to the Washington Convention October 13, when all the Kiwanis clubs in the Capital district will gather for two days of business and pleasure. The Washington Kiwanis club bears a reputation for being highly hospitable and a very enjoyable event is anticipated by those who will attend from here. The attendance prize last night was donated by Louis Kaufman and second by Jim Ley. Crews Wooding contributed the "silent boost," a package of cigarettes at each plate. Chairman C. G. Evans, of the Educational Committee, announced as speakers for the next meeting Judge D. Price Withers and George Shinn. The subject was assigned the subject, "The Joy of Railroad-riding Together With Methods of Butting a Strike."

THREE ELIGIBLES FOR BRISTOL P. O.

(BY GEO. H. MANNING)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—The Civil Service Commission today notified the postoffice department that the three eligibles from the examination taken several months ago of candidates for postmaster at Bristol, Virginia, are: Henry G. Francis, Charles T. Gauthier and John J. Alley, standing in the order named.

Congressman C. Bascom Slemmons, of the Ninth District, who was today asked by the department to recommend one of the three for appointment, said he was undecided which to name. It is understood that about a year ago Mr. Slemmons was tentatively pledged to support Alley, but conditions have undergone a little change since. He will probably visit Bristol and talk with some of the leaders before making a recommendation.

Meanwhile John Anderson, who is serving as acting postmaster will hold on. Anderson could likely have secured the place but he is under the required age for a regular postmaster and was unable to take the examination.

W. F. G. HARDING WILL NOT BE RENAMED ON BOARD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—While it was said at the White House today there had been "no developments in the Federal Reserve Board situation" and that President Harding had made no pledge to nominate or not to nominate any one as governor of the board, some administration leaders in Congress who discussed the case with the chief executive said their understanding was that he was not "disposed" to nominate W. F. G. Harding as governor of the board.

Governor Harding's term expired last month and his appointment has been urged by many bankers and members of Congress and opposed by others.

Petrograd Yearns For Better Day Life Is Listless

PETROGRAD, Sept. 22.—Hope that the day the capital of Russia will be transferred back to Petrograd is buoyed up the spirits of many residents. His ghost like city that Peter the Great built to serve as the center of Russia's power.

No official word not even a semi-official hint has been given that the Bolshevik regime will return the capital here from Moscow, but many Petrogradites base their hopes that this will occur on the fact that Petrograd has been built for government purposes and is far more fitted to house government offices than overcrowded Moscow.

If the time does come that the Bolshevik officials lose their fear of attack from outside, these Petrograd residents say the government inevitably must return to the city that offers it comfortable quarters and immediate proximity to land and sea. While the fear of attack exists, these same features of Petrograd's location make it a dangerous site for a capital. Finland is too close, and the Finnish Gulf and the Neva offer anchorage for foreign warships.

Shrewd citizens are now buying up Petrograd's property and holding it against the day when the now almost depopulated city shall again be the crowded capital.

The Petrograd port has shown great activity this summer, but most of the factory chimneys of the city and suburbs are still smokeless, and the streets, as compared with busy Moscow, seem like those of a country village.

A few pedestrians, an automobile or two, now and then a slow moving horse-drawn truck, and the scattering of cabs in the great broad avenues laid out by Peter the Great to make Petrograd magnificent, seem lost in the city's spaciousness.

Great government buildings that border the plazas and squares are now occupied by small bureaus of the main ministries at Moscow. Huge palaces are empty, occupied only by caretakers, or transformed into museums, open but a few hours each week and even then visited only by sightseeing tourists, now and then a little group of art students.

Many shops are open, selling mostly second-hand furniture and costly bric-a-brac from the houses of the once great. The money is much scarcer than in speculation-mad, seemingly prosperous Moscow.

Gretna Affair A Closed Chapter; Suits Dropped

(Continued From Page One) lence to said detectives or anyone else arrested and then they have them required to give bond to keep the peace.

The course pursued by W. T. Shelton and Mr. Thomas Whitehead the distinguished attorney representing the prohibition department in stating to three justices who were convened in a full definite day for the purpose of trying the other warrants that the detectives were not trustworthy and that if a full trial was held, the evidence was much to be commended.

In view of the evidence we are of the opinion that the account given by said detectives to the Danville Register of the occurrences at the trial of Ramsey was gross exaggeration. That the members of the grand jury are in favor of the enforcement of the prohibition law is indicated by the fact that we have returned some thirty odd indictments against law violators.

J. J. Speer Donates Fine Golf Cup

Interest in the game of golf is increasing steadily all over the country. This interest is strongly felt in Danville, and has just been given an added impetus by a pleasing way.

J. J. Speer, has offered to the Danville Golf Club a handsome cup to be placed in competition in a tournament to be played sometime in October, and annually thereafter until such time as the cup shall have been won three times. Each winner of the event will have his name and the date of the tournament in which he won engraved on the cup, and the lucky winner of three legs on the cup will become its permanent possessor.

The club has very cheerfully accepted Mr. Speer's generous offer, and the details of the tournament will be announced later by the tournament committee. However, play will be match play on a handicap basis, and every member of the club is expected to get out his trustiest clubs and get in shape.

This is the first time such a cup has been placed in competition and with the trophy tournaments, and play for the president's cup, presents a pleasant aspect to next year's golfing season.

IN THE MAYOR'S COURT

Four Mapp Act violations and a traffic ordinance violation comprised the police docket this morning so far as rendering judgement was concerned. A few cases were dismissed and continued.

Mapp Act violations involving Elijah Lee, a white man, and Charles Parker and Piez Womack, colored were heard, and resulted in fines of $10 and costs being imposed on each. Two young boys testified of whiskey transactions in which Lee is alleged to have bought whiskey from Parker. Womack is also said to have bought liquor for the party. Parker denied selling any whiskey but admitted getting it and handing it over the fence. It will cost just $10 and costs for handing it over the fence," responded the mayor.

J. B. Turner was fined $10 and costs for violating the Mapp Act but a similar charge against J. C. Turner, a brother, was dismissed. A pint of whiskey was found in their machine but J. B. Turner claimed it as his, the brother stating that he knew a thing of it being there.

Venezelist Plot Is Uncovered; Arrests Made

(By The Associated Press.) ATHENS, Sept. 22.—Announcement is made of the discovery of a plot to return former Premier Venizelos to power. Several arrests have been made, the authorities conducting a house to house search.

Lithopolis Still Same Old Town Of O. Henry Fame

LITHOPOLIS, Ohio, Sept. 22.—Lithopolis of O. Henry fame, characters upon whom he loved to dwell in facetious manner, are no more, but it has the same "business district," the same four churches and its stone quarry remotely resembling an industry. You will look in vain for Lithopolis in the railroad time tables, but the palling fences on Columbus, South and Main streets do not bar neighborly conversation.

The village's scenic atmosphere has changed, but little in the years that have passed since O. Henry's "Letters to Lithopolis" were inspired back in 1905.

The recipient of these letters was Miss Mabel Wagnalls, whose mother, Mrs. Hester Wagnalls, and grandmother, Mrs. Mary Willis are buried in the beautiful little cemetery "on the hill on the road out of town."

Miss Wagnalls' father, at one time a Lutheran minister in the senior member of the publishing firm that bears his name. Miss Wagnalls now is Mrs. Richard Jones, of New York. Alta Jungkurth, the "tomestone lady" in Columbus, the Willis homestead where Mabel Wagnalls visited, has burned down and the Lutheran church which adjoined it, is building a parsonage on its site.

The drug store is still operated by L. S. Bennett and "indulges in literature on the side." The butcher and barber shops still grace the "business district," and the postoffice remains the focal center of the town.

One objection is voiced over the statement in the preface of the letters by Lithopolis people—that written by Mabel Wagnalls saying "a new house is never added. Rather than do this people leave the town, or die—it is cheaper."

Lithopolis people are proud of their town for its stimulus to the imagination of a genius—even for so brief a period—and they are proud of their former townspeople that so become noted. They live here because they love the town, the declare; the graveyard on the hill is held in reverent esteem, and they tell you that when they die, no matter where, they'd like to be buried in Lithopolis.

State Democrats to Wage War In Seventh and Ninth

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 22.—The Democratic party in Virginia will center its fight in the fall campaign in the seventh and ninth congressional districts.

This was the sentiment expressed here tonight at a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee, which attended by many of the party leaders including Senators Swanson and Glass, Governor Trinkle, and Former Governor Stuart.

Speakers predicted success for the party in the coming contests, and Senators Swanson and Glass both emphasized their belief that the Democrats would be successful in the next national election.

Both also promised their support in the seventh and ninth districts. In the former, the Paul-Harrison contest again is to the forefront, and in the latter, John H. Harginger, Republican and George C. Peery, Democrat, are aspiring for seat vacated by Congressman Slemmons.

The report of Congressman Dalling, of Massachusetts in the Paul-Harrison contest was adopted in a resolution adopted at tonight's conference.

Another resolution which was approved, endorsed the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, and provided for a campaign by Senatorial districts to raise $24,000 still needed to complete Virginia's quota of $50,000.

67 and 40 Cents Per Cuss Is Price Quaser Must Pay

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Sept. 22.—It now costs 67 cents per violation for breaking the Third Commandment: common or garden variety of profanity in 40 cents a cuss. Peery, Democrat, is trying Tom Burns for swearing at Miss Alice Jackson unearthed the following blue law, passed in 1794:

"If any person of the age of sixteen years or upward shall profane, curse or swear by the name of God, Jesus Christ or the Holy Ghost, every person so offending shall pay the sum of 67 cents for each profane, curse or oath. Persons swearing by other names than the aforesaid shall pay 40 cents for each curse word uttered."

After perusing this venerable ordinance and hearing what Burns is alleged to have said to Miss Jackson, the Squire collected $2.01 from the offender.

New Tobacco Storage Company Is Chartered

The old P. B. Gravelly tobacco plant on Bridge street has been re-chased by E. B. Young and E. P. McGee who have formed an association to be known as the Alliance Storage Inspection company. A charter for which has been issued by the State Corporation commission. The purchase price of this large piece of property was $45,000. The building is an unusually large one standing in the angle created by the intersection of Colquhoun street with Bridge. It has a frontage on Bridge of 50 feet runs back a distance of 200 feet, a large wing in the rear being 175 feet wide. Most of the plant is four stories in height, the remainder 5.

It is the purpose of Messrs. Young and McGee to operate a storage warehouse for tobacco, this being deemed a prudent investment with the anticipated increased demand for storage room with the operation here of the Co-Operative Marketing system.

The new concern which has a capital stock of $50,000 will not in any way affect the present association of Messrs. Young and McGee with John E. Hughes and Co., Inc.

Officers of the new organization are E. F. Magee, president; E. B. Young, vice-president and W. B. Griffith, secretary and treasurer.

The new concern will have a capacity for 4,000 hogheads, and will be ready to operate with the opening of the coming season.

VICTIMS OF MINE DISASTER ARE LAID AT REST

JACKON, Calif., Sept. 22.—The forty six bodies recovered from the Argonaut mine were buried today.

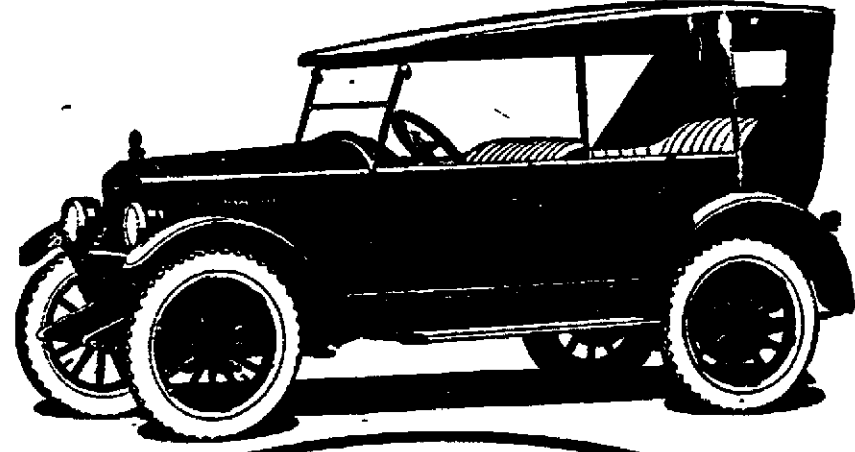

All other business and domestic activity of Jackson ceased. Even down in the depths of the mountain where search is on for the 47th victim the party stopped its labors.

Twenty-seven bodies were born to the Catholic church, eight to the Protestant and eleven to the Greek Catholic, in three separate corteges. The service at the church was an hour apart to permit the mourners to pay final honors to all. A band headed each cortege. Over each grave was placed a wreath, the final tribute of Jackson.

The fate of the missing victim, William Fessel, remained as great a puzzle today as it was when it was announced that his body could not be found.

The search for Fessel will be continued until he has been found, or it is determined that he has been lost beyond recovery. It was announced today by E. A. Stent, vice president of the Argonaut mine.

The distribution of the relief funds to the dependent of the victims is in the hands of the Red Cross and the compensation department of the state industrial accident commission. Every four weeks for 24 weeks each dependent widow or next kin will receive a check from the state. These checks range from $52 to $84.

Do You Believe In "Love At First Sight?"

A CERTAIN PHILOSOPHER HAS DECREED THAT

"Love Begins with the first Look and Ends with the First Kiss."

This theory, half fanciful, half bitter, is now as out of date as the corsets and snuff of its epoch. Today people hold that Love's beginning is not that first glance of Courtship at all, not even the first tender thought. Long before these, a host of deep-down impulses, of unacknowledged, wayward wishes, of traits suppressed, of "temperamentalities" not recognized, must have combined subconsciously to prepare his or her conscious personalities for what they call "That time when we knew we cared."

Take the affairs of many of your friends. You remember the time when they first met * * * and so on. Then

WHY DID THEY NOT APPEAR?

Citizens of Gretna, who raised their voice in protest to the exaggerated tale of two North Carolina detectives following a preliminary hearing before magistrates, will feel that their efforts to have the honor of the town vindicated, have not been in vain. A judicial enquiry into the matter, which probably cost the State a good bit of money, has resulted in a clean bill of health given the town. The grand jurors charged with making a painstaking enquiry and who apparently lived up to the letter of Judge Clement's verbal injunction, have heaped ignominy on the heads of the two private detectives and also on those of officers who corroborated their views in the matter. The report made to the court yesterday is a repudiation of the group of men who insisted that there had been a near riot. The detectives are charged openly with perjury and by inference the State and county officers who emphatically supported them are discredited and their accounts are held as not ringing true.

There is just one point which we believe should have been enquired into and that is whether or not the two men were actually intimidated and purposely frightened away from Chatham by being told that a series of warrants were waiting to be served on them. Very probably the grand jury, in the light of its action, would not have accepted the stories of the men as given by themselves but at the same time we feel that they should have been given adequate assurances of protection by the authorities and the opportunity of at least appearing to tell their tale. There seems to be no doubt that there was intimidation. It may have been a word of caution from a friend who really thought that such warrants existed or it may have been a plot to keep the men beyond the reach of the grand jury.

Their absence from Chatham after making a train journey to the railway station there is strongly suggestive of a coercive effort. It would have further clarified the atmosphere had they been given an unrestricted opportunity of presenting their side of the matter to the inquisitorial body.

SAMS CUSTOMERS.

Measured in dollars, American exports to Europe now are more than twice as big as before the war, though there has been a considerable falling off compared with a year ago. From the first of the year to Aug. 1, we sent Europe about $637,000,000 worth of goods more than she shipped us. This, when it comes to balancing the books, leaves us figuratively in the hole at a rate of $1,000,000,000 a year.

Which is doing fairly well at helping Europe back on its feet, considering what she already owes us. Of course, some of this trade debt is balanced in gold but only a fraction of it. A great mystery, where the financial funds come from.

The complaint from Europe must be because we don't give our stuff away instead of sell it on credit. How about that with South America, which we used to hear so much about? Well, the answer is—

For the first seven months of 1932, our exports to South American countries totaled about $122,000,000. However, in the same months, we bought from South America $55,000,000 more than we sold her.

So our trade with that direction is growing—the wrong way. Our trade with Asiatic countries—China, Japan, India, etc.—is also running twice as big as before the war.

In the first seven months this year our exports to Asia totaled $257,000,000. But Asia shipped us about $171,500,000 more than we shipped her.

We sell Europe more than she ships us. We sell Asia and South America less than they sell us. Logically the situation should be reversed if it is only by importing more than we export that we can ever hope to get back what we have loaned Europe.

NOGALES, Ariz., Sept. 22.—While attempting to leave the station here late this afternoon, the Army's right C-2 suffered an accident to its rigging gear and as a result the big balloon will not get away on the next leg of its flight until tomorrow morning, it was announced. The C-2 will leave for Yuma, at daybreak tomorrow, flying over Tucson enroute, its commander stated.

Scoop's Colyum

PLEASEANT GAF, Sept. 22.—(Grapevine Wireless).—Everybody seems to be in favor of having a dog show in connection with the fair. This will prove an interesting feature of the Fall fair, and will give the people an opportunity to see a lot of dogs together at one time. Heretofore we have had only flat dogs and a few lap dogs, the prospect of seeing the real article, alive and barking, auto bring out the crowds. Think of the hub-dub and the real time when ham bones and pigs nuckles are thrown into the kennel.

Who the poor dog has been neglected and kicked around so much is hard to understand in the days of one-half of one per cent. Verily, he is the uncomplaining friend of man and deserves better treatment. Dogs are a good deal like people, some more so than others, due perhaps to association and environment. Some are smart and tricky, some are lazy and good-for-nothing, while a dog that is to each other, properly and whose good qualities have been cultivated most always evinces gentlemanly habits and kindly traits.

It will be in order for the reporter to interview the prize-winning canines and give The Bee readers their views on problems of the day. What they have to say, buggies, short-haired hounds and cat cats will be illuminating to say the least. Watch the papers. Now is the time to subscribe!

It began:

And it continues in the same vein—two, three, five, eight. And it ends:

"I answer and say that I, m, take you in my arms and pour out the cravings of my heart. Answer and say that I may utter those words which will break my heart and cause my lady if they remain unsaid. 'Oh, lady of my dreams, my very soul cries out to yours.' Your delightfully wretched slave—He signed it and said, 'Now who in schoolfield will I find it?'"

Alias the Lone Wolf

BEGIN HERE TODAY
The reformed crackman, MICHAEL LANYARD, known to the police as the LONE WOLF, is attempting to recover the stolen jewels of EYE DE MONTAIGNE, the woman he loves.

Lanyard, who met Eve in southern France, rescued her from robbery at the hands of the brutal Parisian Apache, DUPONT, believes that the jewels were stolen by a motoring party consisting of the American, WHITTAKER MONK; his secretary, PENNY; the latter's brother, JULIUS, and the COUNT and COUNTESS DE LORNGES. De Lorges is murdered by Dupont. Later in Paris, Lanyard finds the countess, learns that her real name is LIANE DELORME, and enters her house to discover the jewels. He finds her being throttled to death by Dupont.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI
Wolf vs. Wildcat

EVEN a journeyman stranger may know the thrill of professional pride in a good job well done: Dupont was grinning at his work, and so intent upon it that his first intimation of any interference came when Lanyard took him from behind, broke his hold upon the woman (and lamentably failed to break his back at the same time), whirled him round with a jerk that all but unsocketed an arm.

Before the thug could regain his balance, Lanyard placed surely on the heel of Dupont's jaw, just below the ear, a blow that, coming straight from the shoulder and carrying all Lanyard had of weight and force and will to punish, in spite of Dupont's heaviness, fairly lifted him from his feet and dropped him backward across a chaise-longue, from which he slipped senseless to the floor.

With bruised and aching knuckles to prove that the blow had been one to stun or no, Lanyard believed it safe to count Dupont hors de combat, for a time at least. In any event, the risk had to be chanced: Liane Delorme was in a plight demanding immediate relief.

She had fallen inert, and lay semi-prostrate on a shoulder, with limbs grotesquely slack and awry, as if in unpleasant mimicry of a broken doll. The twisted handkerchief round her throat had loosened, but not enough to give relief. Lanyard removed it, took from her dressing table a toilet-water flask and drenched her face and bosom with its pungent contents.

She gasped, started convulsively, and began to breathe with less effort. That dreadful rattling in her throat was stilled.

Since his fall Dupont had made neither moan nor stir. No crescent ridges showed beneath the half-shut lids. He was so motionless, he seemed scarcely to breathe. Lanyard dug the toe of a boot into his ribs none too gently, but without satisfaction of any doubts. The fellow gave no sign of sensibility, but lay utterly relaxed, with the look of one dead.

Dropping to his knees, Lanyard bent over the body to search for symptoms of animation. He perceived them instantly. With inconceivable suddenness Dupont demonstrated that he was very much alive.

An arm like the flexible limb of a tree wound itself affectionately round Lanyard's neck, clipped his head to Dupont's yearning bosom, ground his face into the fannel fold of a foul-scented shirt. Simultaneously the huge body heaved prodigiously, and after a brief interval of outrance of endurance wasted. Then the woman, with flying draperies, a figure like a fury, sped to the banister rail and leaning over emptied the several shots remaining in Dupont's automatic down the wall of the staircase. It is doubtful if she saw anything to aim at or accomplished more than to speed the Apache's flight.

"He got away," Liane said in a faint voice. "I saw him in the street . . . staggering like a sot . . ."

She put a knee behind his shoulder for support, and he rested his head back upon it and drank deep from the glass which she held to his lips.

"It is better, that pain, monsieur?" He replied with an uncertain nod, pressing a careful hand to his side.

" . . . wound that animal gave me a month ago."

"Which animal?"

"Monsieur of the garotte, Liane; recently the assassin of De Lorges, before that the ex-chef de cuisine of the Chateau de Montalais."

"Albert Dupont?" Her old terror revived. "My God! what have I ever done to that one that he should seek my life?"

"What had De Lorges?"

Her eyes turned away, she sat for a moment in silent thought.

"But how did he get in? I had not one suspicion I was not alone until that handkerchief—"

"Naturally."

"And you, my friend?"

"I saw him enter, and followed."

This was strictly within the truth. Lanyard paused to sip his brandy and soda, and under cover of that, summon ingenuity to the fore; here a little hand-made fabrication was indicated.

"I started to walk to my hotel, the Chatham. I saw I was being followed. To make sure, I ran—and the spy ran after me. I twisted and doubled all through this quarter. Then I turned down this street, hoping to pick up a cab in the Champs-Élysées. Of a sudden I see Dupont. He lets himself in at the service entrance."

"I take a moment's thought; it is plain he is here for no good purpose. I follow him in . . . The state of this room tells the rest."

"It is no matter." The woman reviewed the ruins of her boudoir. Bending forward, she closed a hand upon his arm. Emotion troubled her countenance. "My friend, my dear friend, tell me what I can do to repay you?"

"Help me," said Lanyard simply, holding her eyes.

"How is that—help you?"

"To make my honor clear." Speaking rapidly and with unfeigned feeling, he threw himself upon her knees. "You know I am no more what I was once, in this Paris, when you first knew me. You know I have given up all that. Now I stand accused of two crimes."

"Two?"

"Two in one, I hardly know which is the greater: that of stealing, or that of violating the hospitality and confidence of those good ladies of the Chateau de Montalais. I cannot rest while they think me guilty . . . If you think you owe me anything, Liane, help me to find and restore the Montalais jewels."

"Let me think." She was staring at the floor. "You must give me time. I will do what I can. I promise you that. Perhaps—she met his gaze again, but he saw something crafty in her smile—"I have a scheme already in mind. We will discuss that in the morning, when I have slept on it."

"You give me new hope," Lanyard finished his drink and made as if to rise, but he saw a spasm of pain knotting his face. "Afraid I must have a cab," he said in a low voice. "And if you could lend me a coat of some sort to cover these rags . . ."

"If you think I dream of letting you leave this house—in pain and perhaps to run into the arms of the police—you little know me, Monsieur Michael Lanyard!"

"Paul Martin, if you don't mind."

"The guest rooms are there." She waved a hand to indicate the front door. "You will find everything you need to make you comfortable for tonight."

"I am well content, Liane."

ADVENTURE AHEAD

By Zoe Beckley

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Finding she can no longer stand the insults that are heaped on her as a servant in the home of a newly rich mistress.

SALLY, an orphan girl, sets out for the city where she secures work as assistant in a soda fountain. With her she carries memories of HARRY STANLEY, son of her former mistress and the only person who ever has treated her kindly.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

SALLY began as second assistant "soda jerker" at $7 a week. She roomed with one of the other store girls and had meals in the Morosos' kitchen.

She worked from 8 to 6, and every third night till 10. The evenings she wasn't in the store she often walked out with Anna, her roommate, or read in the public library. Sometimes she saved a dollar or two, with instinctive prudence.

In three months she was first assistant and got $10. She was quick and intelligent at her work, attractive in her pink and blue gingham shop dresses and popular with the customers.

"Keep it up, Sally, you'll all right!" said the round little Italian who kept the store. "Some time Anna get married and you walk into her shoes."

Sally glanced at the generous shrew who was promised, then at her own neat feet. She looked her gratitude at Moroso's offer, but smiled and shook her head.

"Thanks, Mr. Moroso, but I want to move out to Chicago, or maybe New York even."

Moroso's fat face fell in disapproval. "Whatever think nice girl alone do in Chicago?"

"Tend soda fountains for one thing. But there's other things."

"Yeah. And there's men only too glad give pretty girl like you chance at other things, like you say."

Sally smiled sunnily at the "pretty girl" and sardonically at the off-hand warning against the big city for the pretty girl.

"That's good news!" she said sardoniously. "A girl needn't accept things, but there's nothing to prevent her from looking over her chances. A chance means more than just risk doesn't it, Mr. Moroso?"

He shook his head. "You play wit' fire, I'll girl!" Sally looked serious.

"But you can't get a lot with fire," she said determinedly, "if you han-

A TRIPLE SLAYING IN LITTLE ITALY

By Michael Fiaschetti

SHOTS into the night—

And another feud had vented its spite.

On the sidewalk of Little Italy lay two young girls dead and a man dying.

The girls were innocent victims of the crime. The man was a murderer.

But his lips were sealed. He wouldn't give us any clue as to the murderers.

We went into the underworld. From information gathered there, we learned that the man was James R. Fiaschetti had sworn vengeance against this victim. It was an old vendetta dating back to Italy where they had both paid attention to the same girl.

Before we could lay our hands on the man, he slipped for Italy.

He led us to his whereabouts, went into the underworld. There I met an escaped convict, with plenty of money.

"I'll do my disguise. I grew a beard and a mustache and I can look like any man."

I got in with the worst gangs. After hanging around for some time, I saw one of the men wanted for a murder in Brooklyn. I had to give him arrested without giving myself away.

This was done by the timely aid of the Italian consul.

But the gang became suspicious. So I changed my disguise and got away safely.

My movements were known. I had to keep on the jump all the time.

Several times I received threatening letters.

Once I was shot at. But Homer H. Brington, American consul, with whom I was walking, saw the leveled revolver and made me duck just in time.

Another time I had to drop to the ground suddenly when bullets began to fly around me. I was being followed by a gang in a closed automobile.

But it is all in the game. And I never care as long as I get the men I'm after.

MOONSHINE ON WHEELS

MARTINSBURG, W. Va., Sept. 21.—Operations of a community distillery that functioned in Jefferson county like a threshing machine were disclosed at Federal Court here today. A plea of guilty was entered by

Harry Osborne, who admitted that he took orders for moonshine "to be made on the premises."

Osborne charged that Ed Turner, another Jefferson county resident, was promoter of the enterprise and added that they had more business than they could handle.

DR. A. R. MOORE DIES

Proposed Outing With Ex-Wife Lands Him in Trouble

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 22.—An outing that Hazen H. Witt of a prominent Pennington Gap, Virginia family, had planned to spend with his divorced wife, at the Zoo here yesterday was abruptly terminated at its very beginning, when Witt was arrested on a charge of white slavery.

The charge was preferred by Miss Kate M. Olswang, 19, of Washington, Long Island, who told the police that Witt took her from New York to Washington, Lynchburg, Danville and other places, all the time promising to marry her. Miss Olswang was an important witness some time ago in a suit in Chicago in which Mrs. Witt retained a divorce.

Witt had arranged to meet his former wife and three children and spend a day at the Zoo. Miss Olswang apparently heard of it and had them overhauled on the way and had Witt taken to police headquarters by detectives on the white slave charge. She was at police headquarters when they returned with Witt.

Witt is 40 years old, son of J. F. Witt, of Pennington Gap, Democratic candidate for the State legislature from Lee county two years ago, and a brother-in-law of a prominent manufacturer of Lynchburg.

Miss Olswang, the complainant, came to Washington with her mother, a few days ago, and told the police authorities she came to make a final appeal to Witt to keep his promises to marry her. She told the police that she met Witt in New York two years ago where both were employed in an office.

After courting her for months, Witt, she said, told her he was married and had a wife and family in Washington, then to Chicago and Chicago, where his divorce was granted and finally back to New York.

Miss Olswang told the officers that Witt on three occasions had obtained marriage licenses, one in New Haven and the other two in New York. On one occasion, the girl said, she and Witt went to the home of a minister to be married and while the minister was in another room Witt climbed out of a window and fled down a fire escape.

On another occasion, the girl said, they went to a justice of the peace to get married, and Witt when the ceremony was about to be performed, said he had lost the license. She told the police today she is still ready to marry Witt.

Witt was released on $5,000 bail for a hearing next week.

When seen with his sister, Katherine, today in the office of Congressman Slepoff, to whom he had appealed for aid, Witt made denial of all these allegations made by Miss Olswang.

"Miss Olswang, her sister-in-law and myself left New York together," said Witt. "We were all going to Virginia. She went on to Danville to meet friends at 848 Tenthon avenue. I went as far as Lynchburg with them and I stayed there that night with my sister. The next day I went to Pennington Gap. I never made the trip with Miss Olswang as she said I did."

It was learned last night that Miss Olswang did visit in Danville recently, but while here she did not see Witt. When she left here she visited friends in Lynchburg and it is possible that she saw him there. Miss Olswang stayed about two weeks in this city and while here met a great many young people of the city.

IS CHARGED WITH SECRETING CHILD

RICHMOND, Sept. 22.—Mrs. Estelle Lewis, age 27, of 11-2 East Marshall Street, has been arrested by the police in connection with the disappearance of William Katherine White, aged 12, daughter of Mrs. Kate Patterson, of China Street, who has been missing from the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Moxley, 520 South Pine since noon last Thursday. Mrs. Lewis is charged with "unlawfully and feloniously seizing, taking and secreting the said child, of whom in the mother was the only lawful custodian."

Mrs. Lewis will be tried in juvenile and domestic relations court today.

A tall, thin woman in a checkered suit is said to have come to the Moxley home last Thursday and represented herself as a half-sister of the child, and asked that she might keep her an hour.

Settlement of

Strike on C. & O.

Made Yesterday

Defense in Case of Harry Paulin

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 22.—The strike of shoopmen on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway was settled early tonight at a conference of representatives of the strikers and the management. The general manager of the road announced.

The management, however, refused to consider any adjustment with the striking clerks. Mr. Parrish said.

About 8,000 shoopmen are included in the settlement which the general manager stated was "agreeable to both sides."

The road has promised to take the men back within thirty days, according to Mr. Parrish. He added, however, that the strikers would be returned to work "as soon as we can arrange for it."

The settlement was made on the basis of the Willard-Jewell agreement with the executive committee of the strikers, which the re-instatement of all strikers, was dropped by the negotiators.

Under this clause, the road would have been obliged to re-employ striking clerks, clerks and the management. Representatives of the shoopmen, urged in the negotiation that the clerks also be re-instated, but Mr. Parrish stated when the company refused to consider this proposal.

At present Mr. Parrish said, the shop craft forces on the road are about 60 per cent. normal.

A formal statement issued from the office of the road after the settlement was "upon terms satisfactory to both the company and the shoopmen, and which fully preserved the promises of the company to the old men who remained in its service, and to the new men who have been hired."

The conference today had been preceded in the last few days by numerous informal meetings, and it was generally reported during the progress of these that the one hitch to settlement was the unwillingness of the shoopmen to recede from their stand that the clerks, who had been struck on July 19, also should be allowed to return to work.

The negotiations which led to final settlement were in charge of Mr. Parrish and O. H. Stewart, president of shop federation of the Chesapeake and Ohio line.

It was said that in striking the clerks were assured of the support of the shoopmen, and shop strikers here today adopted resolutions protesting against any settlement that left the clerks out of the picture.

H. J. Osborne, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Chesapeake and Ohio clerks, in which the strikers hold memberships, tonight refused to comment upon the situation.

The core of all striking clerks have been filled, and negotiations now are in progress between the company and the recently formed Chesapeake and Ohio Clerks' Association, looking toward a new working agreement. This ward is expected to be signed tomorrow.

With the Chesapeake and Ohio now at peace with its shop workers, the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac has a full shop force at work. It is said, and the Atlantic Coast Line is rapidly nearing its normal complement. The Southern and Seaboard Air Line have also reinstated their striking shoopmen.

Kidnap Prisoner,
Flee Court Room

Baltimore Detectives Defy Says He Was Justice Martin—He Ord- Drugged When
ers to Produce Socolow. He Was Wed

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—With Justice Martin on his feet and shouting: "Bring back that prisoner. Stop them, stop them!" Detectives yesterday afternoon literally trapped the ex parte term of the Supreme Court, Walter (Nosey) Socolow, wanted in Baltimore for the murder of William E. Norris, wealthy contractor of that city who was shot and robbed of $7,000, August 18, in one of Baltimore's most exclusive residence districts.

Socolow, about whom Baltimore detectives formed a sort of flying wedge, was rushed into a taxi cab, which sped east in Chambers Street closely followed by another car in which were detectives and reporters. Pursuit was quickly eluded and thirty minutes later, Police Headquarters was notified that the prisoner and his captors had reached New Jersey and were beyond the jurisdiction of New York courts.

Officers Accused of Contempt.

Justice Martin then issued a writ demanding the appearance of Socolow before him at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He ordered the local police to produce him and told them Socolow was in their custody at the time of his "escape." The police are also charged with aiding in the "kidnaping."

Justice Martin characterized the conduct of all officers who had any part in the affair as "contempt of court and disorderly conduct" and said he would consider whether any other officers had not been committed in taking the prisoner out of this jurisdiction without proper authority.

Theodore Blum, of Shaine & Wein-rub, counsel for Socolow, said the action of the detectives was a "kidnaping outrage" regarding which he would ask Gov. Miller and Mayor Hylan to take action. He accused the New York City officers who were in charge of Socolow, of collusion with the Baltimore detectives.

The scene in Justice Martin's court room more nearly resembled a street riot than a hearing, on a writ of habeas corpus sued out by Socolow to prevent his extradition from this city where he was arrested as a fugitive, to Baltimore, where he is accused of murder.

Socolow's attorney, asked for a postponement, saying one member of the press is in Washington getting word that Socolow was not in Maryland, and when the murder was committed, Justice Martin refused the request and when the prisoner's counsel said they were not ready, announced: "Writ dismissed and prisoner remanded."

Hurry Out of Court Room.

Up to this time Socolow, a pale, dark youth of nineteen had sat handcuffed to a New York officer and holding his hat in front of his face to avoid being photographed. Baltimore detectives, Charles Abler, William Murphy and Fred Orton, jerked Socolow to his feet and started with him for the door. Half a dozen New York detectives got in the way of Assistant District Attorney Driscoll who rushed after the prisoner.

Justice Martin leaped to his feet and shouted repeatedly at the fleeing officers to return with their prisoner. Mr. Driscoll repeated the shout, "Bring back that prisoner." As he rushed into the corridor, Socolow seemed to be resisting the detectives, but was lifted from his feet and pushed into the taxi cab. On the street a crowd gathered and soon the rumble of a motor car was heard as it sped from the court room.

Court Rebukes Lieut. Gegan.
When Lieut. Gegan of the Bomb Squad returned hallooed to the courtroom, one rebuked by Justice Martin, who said:
"That was an outrage. You have that man here at 2 o'clock to-morrow or I shall hold the Police Department responsible for the scene enacted in this court."

Lieut. Gegan sent three of his men to the ferry to head off the detectives and their prisoner. Mr. Driscoll called up Police Headquarters and asked that officers be sent to the Pennsylvania Station to intercept Socolow if an attempt was made to leave the city by train.

King At Play
In Highlands

LONDON, Sept. 23.—King George is enjoying himself these autumn days at Balmoral in the highlands more than anywhere else he is there able to get away from ceremonies and formalities and pass his days as an ordinary citizen. He is never without a few guests at Balmoral, but never entertains there on a large scale. He does not have to.

He is always on early rises in the highlands, and almost as soon as the sun has disappeared the mist from the towering hills, the royal party is wandering below the king's bedroom window "skirling" some favorite pibroch.

Every day at Balmoral a certain routine is followed for the king makes a point of being in the open as much as possible. One day there is a grouse shoot on the royal estates or some of the neighboring moors, and the next sees a deer drive in Balmoral Forest or a deer-taking expedition around Loch Lomond.

Another day the king may prefer to go fishing on the "Silver Lee," one of the best salmon rivers in Scotland, or, again, the day may be spent in walking a thin the extensive royal estate or climbing some of the surrounding hills.

PETERSBURG, Va., Sept. 22.—That he was married in Richmond in a drunken, doped, dazed and drugged condition, and that the ceremony was performed in an automobile by a Baptist minister of Church Hill, Richmond, is alleged by J. E. McNamara, well-known citizen of this city, in his suit for annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Ora May Paris, of the Centre Hill apartments. The marriage took place on Aug. 2. The bill of complaint has just been filed.

McNamara alleged that as a part of the plan of Mrs. Paris to entrap him into marriage against his will while he was engaged to another woman of Petersburg, succeeded in getting him into a doped condition and that he did not know what he was doing, and while in that condition she carried him in an automobile, driven by herself, to Richmond, and that later in the day she carried him to the Jefferson hotel, where he alleged, she registered under the name of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McNamara. At that time his condition was such that he had to be helped out of the automobile by negro employees of the hotel, the complaint states.

McNamara's Allegations.
At 8 o'clock that night, Mr. McNamara alleges, that he was removed from the hotel room without his knowledge and taken to a minister's home on Church Hill, where the ceremony was performed. It took place in the automobile, he alleges, charging that Mrs. Paris knew that if he went into the minister's house his condition easily would become apparent.

McNamara further alleges that the marriage license was obtained here by Mrs. Paris without his knowledge or consent. He also states in his complaint that he had been married to a woman named March and had taken her out frequently, but that sometime during the month he had discontinued his visits for satisfactory reason. Since that time she has dogged his steps and had informed him that she intended to marry him and that if he did not marry her he would never marry anyone actually threatening that before he should do so she would kill him.

McNamara claims that the first opportunity she had to carry out her threat was when he was in the city. He paid a visit to her apartment at her special request. The visit was for the purpose of talking over a matter of business and to prevent her from carrying out certain threats which she is alleged to have made against his sweetheart. He carried a small quantity of whiskey with him, he says, and at her request obtained more. After drinking the whiskey he alleges that his mind went blank from Monday until Thursday, during which time the marriage took place.

Christian Work
In Hospitals
(By The Associated Press.)
ATLANTA, Sept. 23.—We are charged with the responsibility of awakening and creating a Christian conscience for the healing of the sick, the Rev. Frank C. English, of the Presbyterian O. C. est-ern Hospital Association, now in session here. Dr. English is field secretary of the organization.

"Our chief interest gathers around a greater efficiency and potency of Christian work in our hospitals," Dr. English continued. "We are interested in all other hospitals of course, but we are assigned to a task which none other can assume for us."

"Our association has made the first direct attempt to interest the 171,000 ordained ministers and 26,000 lay preachers of America as a whole body in hospital care of the sick. The people must be told what our hospitals are doing, and what we are prepared to do for them sick, and special interest must be taken to provide healing for the poor and otherwise neglected."

"One special purpose of our educational program is to reach the sick and afflicted poor people living in remote places. Thousands are sick or crippled and do not know there is a possibility of being cured. It is a possibility of being cured. It is a possibility of being cured. It is a possibility of being cured."

"We believe that every hospital should render a spiritual ministry to its patients. It is a part of our program to reach out into state, country, municipal and private hospitals and training schools, and extend the church's spiritual ministry to all patients, nurses, interns and all connected therewith."

"This is a stupendous task, but we believe the Christian churches will stand with us and that by their aid we shall be equal to the task."

"Our association has accomplished much in the two years of its life. The first year we had 19 members. We close the second year with a paid membership of 175."

"In every respect we have sought to make our hospitals more efficient and their service more effective. We fully realize that we have problems all our own. The purpose of this convention is to discover our own needs and more perfectly to provide the remedy."

Victim of Richmond Fire
Injured in Auto Wreck

WILSON, N. C., Sept. 22.—C. C. Benton, of Wilson, architect, who sustained injuries when he jumped from an upper story in the Lexington Hotel when it was burned in Richmond last February, had a terrible experience about noon today between Black Creek and Tremont, when an automobile in which he was riding turned turtle and pinned him under its wreckage. He sustained a broken leader in one of his arms and received minor bruises.

Mrs. Benton and the man who was demonstrating the car jumped from the machine and were only slightly hurt, but Mr. Benton, who is still wearing a plaster cast on account of jumping from the Lexington Hotel fire, and hasn't full use of his body, was unable to save himself.
